PREFATORY INFORMATION.

SINCE the last Catalogue was printed in January, 1835, considerable additions have been made to the Library, as well by the purchase of Books out of the general funds, as by some valuable donations from individuals. But the most munificent gift which the Society has yet received, is the splendid Picture by Haydon of "Xenophon and the Ten Thousand Greeks first seeing the Sea from Mount Thèches," during the masterly Retreat which forms so distinguished a feature in Grecian story. This Painting was presented to the Institution by its PATRON, the DUKE OF BEDFORD, in the summer of 1836: it had been won by his Grace in a raffle, in which it had been valued (unframed) at Eight Hundred Guineas.*

SUBJECT OF THE PICTURE.

In the 4th year of the 94th Olympiad, or 400 years before Christ, CYRUS, the youngest son of Darius Ochus, King of Persia, attempted to dethrone his brother ARTAXERXES; but he was defeated, and killed in battle at Cunaxa, near Babylon. His army had been strengthened by an auxiliary force of 10,000 Greeks, whose celebrated Retreat, under the conduct of XENOPHON, forms one of the most remarkable events of ancient history. Exposed to every kind of privation, and constantly harassed by barbarian hordes, their only chance of escape was by reaching the sea, which they at length did at Trapezus (the modern Trebizond), on the borders of the Euxine. The entire distance traversed by the Greeks, during the expedition and retreat, was eleven hundred leagues; and the time occupied in both was one year and three months.

* The number of Shares was Eighty, at Ten Guineas each. His late Majesty King William IV., the Duchess of Kent, the Princess Victoria, the Duke of Sutherland, Lord Durham, Lord Francis Egerton, and Goëthe the Poet, were among the shareholders; the Duke of Bedford had three shares. The size of the Picture is 11 feet 6 inches in length, and 9 feet 6 inches in height.

The more immediate circumstances connected with the Picture are thus related in Xenophon's "Expedition of Cyrus," (Book iv. sect. vii.) as translated by Spelman.

Having advanced "through the country of the Scythians," the Greeks, after marching several days, arrived at a large and populous city, named Gymnias, where they were furnished with a guide, who undertook, under pain of death, "to conduct them, in five days, to a place whence they should see the sea."—"On the fifth day," continues the historian, "they arrived at the holy mountain, called Thèches. As soon as the men who were in the van-guard ascended the mountain, and saw the sea, they gave a great shout; which, when Xenophon and those in the rear heard, they concluded that some other enemies attacked them in front: the noise still increasing as they came nearer, and the men, as fast as they came up, running to those who still continued shouting, their cries swelled with their numbers, so that Xenophon, thinking something more than ordinary had happened, mounted on horseback, and, taking with him Lysius and his horse, rode up to their assistance; and presently they heard the soldiers calling out 'THE SEA! THE SEA!' and cheering one another. At this they all set a-running, the rear-guard as well as the rest, and the beasts of burthen and horses were driven forward. When they were all come to the top of the mountain they embraced one another, and also their generals and captains, with tears in their eyes."

MR. HAYDON'S description of the Picture, as given in his Catalogue, when exhibited at the Egyptian Hall, in 1832, is as follows:—

“The moment I have taken is when Xenophon, seeing the sea, has rode forward to shout it to the army. He is waving his helmet with one hand, and pointing to the sea with the other, mounted on a skew-bald charger.

This Painting has been fixed up at the east end of the Library: the frame is thus inscribed:—

XENOPHON’S FIRST VIEW OF THE SEA,

IN THE RETREAT OF THE TEN THOUSAND.

About the same time, the late SIR JOHN SOANE presented the Institution with a copy of his very interesting *“Description of the House and Museum on the North Side of Lincoln’s Inn Fields,” in which he then resided;
and which, under certain regulations, he has devoted to the furtherance of British art. That Work was not intended for publication, and 150 copies only were printed;
it is a large 4to volume, illustrated with numerous engravings.

With a view both to the better preservation of these important accessions to the Library, and to the inducement it might supply for other gifts, the Committee have caused a glazed book-case to be erected in the News-Room, for the purpose of receiving the more valuable presents made to the Institution. At the present time, the Library consists of upwards of 13,000 volumes.

The following is a List of the Statues, Busts, Masks,
